Small Donations Help the Freshwater Fishing Hall of Fame Continue its Mission

Each year the Fresh Water Fishing Hall of Fame in beautiful Hayward, Wisconsin, works tirelessly to promote fresh water fishing and the legacy of the sport throughout North America.

Home to the world's repository of fresh water fishing records, the 501(c)3 non-profit FWFHOF and museum has attracted visitors from around the globe with a mission of promoting fresh water sport fishing, especially among younger generations of anglers.

Over the next year, the FWFHOF is seeking your support to help grow its education and awareness programs and continue a community service that preserves the fresh water fishing legacy for anglers young and old. The Hall of Fame is currently seeking small, tax-deductible donations of $10 from individuals looking to contribute and help keep the Hall of Fame working for anglers worldwide.

"The angling tradition is important to us, and a little really does go a long way to help make our programming and museum possible," said FWFHOF Executive Director Emmett Brown. "We are hoping that passionate anglers will reach out and help us help them in a mutually beneficial way."

Fresh water fishing continues to be one of the most affordable recreational outings for families, Brown continued, "So why not help the FWFHOF with a small donation to keep this sport one of America's favorite pastimes?"

Thousands have made donations to the FWFHOF since established in the early 1960s and each contribution went directly toward helping educate anglers, maintaining the fresh water records database as well as keeping museum operations functioning and open to the public.

"Without this generous support, none of this would be possible," said Brown. Online contributions can be made securely online visiting the Fresh Water Fishing Hall of Fame website.

The FWFHOF museum and grounds – home to the world-famous four-story-tall leaping musky – is open for tourists and visitors from April 15 to October 31. The organization operates from its offices at the FWFHOF and serves members, media and public inquiries year-round. More information can be found at www.freshwater-fishing.org.

The Fresh Water Fishing Hall of Fame is a 501(c)3 non-profit museum and home to Hayward's landmark four-story-tall musky famous around the world. Since 1960, the FWFHOF has inspired and educated anglers and serves as the authority and repository for all fresh water fishing records. The FWFHOF also recognizes those men and women who have made significant and lasting contributions to the sport of fresh water fishing through its Hall of Fame Program.
